Out of Work, and Too Down to Search On

Millions of Americans have lost their jobs and have stopped looking. Professionals In Transition can help you with your job search.

New York Time Reporter Micheal Luo set out to profile them.

Tatjana is a Serbian immigrant who came to the United States in late 2005 after marrying her husband, "I stopped looking because that feeling of being rejected again and again is hard," she said. "It's just like somebody punching you in the face." At her home in Pfafftown, N.C., Ms. Jovanovic-Grove sanded a piece of a Victorian chair someone hired her to repair over the Internet, but a day's work rarely nets her more than $100...
